KLAN FIGHTS WELL

Secret Order Outnumbered by Antis, Who Wreck Meeting Place.

(By the Associated Press)

PERTH-AMBOY, N. J., Aug. 31.—The battle between Ku Klux Klansmen and other citizens was resumed on the streets of Perth-Amboy this morning and members of the Klan sought to escape from the Odd Fellows hall where they had sought refuge from the attack on their ranks last night in which more than 100 persons are reported to have been injured. One hundred men armed with clubs and stones attacked 30 klansmen early this morning when the klansmen were severely beaten before escaping from their pursuers.

Perth-Amboy resembled a community under martial law this morning as the entire force of police, city firemen, special officials and a company of state troops endeavored to restore order and prevent a renewal of the clash between members of the Klan and other citizens which raged throughout the night during which a number were severely injured. Every physician in the city has treated one or more cases and a considerable number of injured are being tended in hospitals.

The battle started shortly after midnight when a crowd estimated at more than 5,000 men broke up a widely advertised Ku Klux meeting in the Odd Fellows hall. The entire police force of 75 and the city fire department were ordered out and made a desperate effort to protect the 500 klansmen whose meeting place had been surrounded by the clamoring throng.

Klanmen Fight Well.

Firemen and police turned the fire hose on the crowd and dispersed it for the time being, but it returned with increased numbers and swept the opposing forces aside cut the hose to pieces and charged the hall. The klansmen withdrew the attack as well as possible although greatly outnumbered, and fought their way to the doors, windows and fire escapes only to be engulfed in the crowds below.

As the assault continued the klansmen were unable to leave the hall until the chief of police succeeded in clearing a passage, but this was only temporary.

Police Chief Tonneson summoned a detachment of state troopers whose arrival was greeted with yells of derision. Aided by the state troopers police began to extricate the klansmen from their perilous position. Several of them were loaded into three automobiles which the crowd immediately overturned, and then administered severe beatings to the occupants. A patrol wagon received the same treatment and the crowd intercepted an attempted escape over the roofs of the adjoining buildings. These also were badly beaten.

By 2 o'clock it was thought that all klansmen had fled leaving behind them a promise that they would return with a force of 10,000. This was met with the answer that they would be received by 20,000.

Barry Waives His Preliminary for Car Driving Charge

R. L. Barry, alleged driver of the death car in which Archie Moore, superintendent of the Choctaw Cotton Oil company, was killed in a collision with a passenger train here Aug. 12, waived preliminary hearing this morning before Justice H. J. Brown and entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of driving an automobile on a public highway while intoxicated.

Barry's bond was set at $2,000 which was secured without delay.

The charge against Barry represents the first complaint on the new statute under the session laws of 1923.

BAR ASSOCIATION FAVORS MEMBERSHIP IN COURT

GREEK REPLY TO ITALY DISCUSSED

Mussolini Holds Italy's Reply to Curt Note of Greeks.

(By the Associated Press)

ROME, Aug. 31.—The Italian government today had before it Greece's reply to Premier Mussolini's ultimatum embodying seven demands for reparation for the massacre of the Italian officers serving on the Greco-Albanian boundary commission.

The reply declared that the Greek government considers as unjust the attributing by Italy the responsibility for the assassinations and finds it impossible to accept the fourth and fifth demands of the ultimatum considering them violations of the honor of the Greek state.

These demands were that honors in the form of a 21-gun salute paid by a Greek naval squadron to the Italian fleet and that the authorities institute a thorough inquiry into the outrage and that the guilty be apprehended and executed.

The Greek reply closes with the promise of a "just indemnity" to the families of the slain commissioners, and expresses the hope that Italy will not encroach on the rights of Greece.

ROME, Aug. 31.—The Italian government at a meeting today found the Greek reply to its ultimatum to be unacceptable, the Stefani agency says.

The announcement made by the Stefani, which is a semi-official agency, says certain decisions were reached at the meeting but that the ministers declined to say what they were.

The Belgrade correspondent to the Corriere de Italiano says that the Greek charge there has confirmed with the acting foreign minister of Jugo-Slavia, presumably about the controversy between Italy and his country.

Two demonstrations were engaged in by the facisti, says the same paper, in front of the Greek consulate.

RECOGNITION OF MEXICO GOAL OF LONG CONFERENCE

Mexico and United States Agree to Resume Full Relationship.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Acting Secretary Phillips Announces Renewal of Diplomatic Pact.

(By the Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The United States and Mexico have agreed to resume full diplomatic relations.

Formal announcement of the agreement was made today by the state department. Restoration of relations carries with it full recognition by the United States of President Obregon. It results from negotiations recently concluded in Mexico City by Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne.

The American embassy at Mexico City and the Mexican embassy here are to be restored at once to official standing for the first time since the collapse of the Carranza regime in 1920, and all pending claims will be submitted to a specially appointed commission for a settlement.

Acting Secretary Phillips' announcement of the renewal of diplomatic relations in a formal statement was issued at noon. It follows:

"The government of the United States and the government of Mexico in view of the reports and recommendations from the respective high commissions submitted after conferences in the city of Mexico from May 14, 1923, to August 15, 1923, have resolved on the renewal of diplomatic relations between them and are therefore pending the appointment of ambassadors taking necessary steps to accredit their charge d'affaires."

The creation of two claims conventions provided for in the report of the commissioner will be one of the first acts after the resumption of relations. These conventions have been approved by the two governments.

ANSWERS FILED IN MINE PARLEY

Miners and Operators Take Governor's Suggestions for Future Task.

(By the Associated Press)

HARRISBURG, [Bennet] Aug. 31.—Anthracite operators [and] miners' union officials today returned an answer to Gov. Pinchot on his proposals for averting the suspension of mine operations, the miners accepting them as a basis for continuing negotiation and the operators, while objecting to the flat 10 per cent, accept it on condition that an agreement for a long term of years years be effected.

The operators declared themselves in agreement that the governor's proposals on the three points, but asserted that "no general increase in the wages of the anthracite mine workers at this time is justified.

Asking for a 10 percent raise in wages meant the addition of $30,000 annually to the labor cost, the operators asserted, and that "any favorable consideration by us must be conditioned on a durable agreement for a term of years subject to annual review."

FIRE THREATENS DESTRUCTION FOR COLLEGE BUILDING

Flames Bring City to Scene of Destruction at Ada Institution.

LOSS REPORTED SMALL

Roof of Administration Hall of College Group is Threatened.

Ada viewed with wild alarm the possibility of destruction of its pridest institution, the East Central State Teachers college, when flames burst through the roof of the administration building at 8:50 last night.

Viewed from the business center of the city, certain destruction accompanied the gusts of curling flame that sent out its message of warning and the entire city apparently came out to render what assistance possible in checking the flames.

Through the timely arrival of the fire department and fearless work of the crew, flames were soon smothered out with only a comparatively small loss accompanied by the excitement of the night.

Fire Chief Somer Jones could not determine the cause of the fire but attributed its origin to one of two possible sources, defective wiring or a burning metal pot left on the roof of the administration building by repair men.

Loss Estimated at $2000.

Jones estimated that the loss would not possibly exceed $2000 and intimated that it might be less. The fire chief pointed out that with repair of the roof, calcining of the rooms on the top floor and installation of new beaver board ceilings for the entrance hallway would constitute the needed repair.

President A. Linscheid of the college was not in the city at the time of the fire. He stated on his return this morning that the fire would delay the opening of the regular college session scheduled for September 10.

Owing to the failure of the Ninth Legislature to appropriate funds for insurance payments for the teachers colleges of the state, losses incurred through the fire of last night were not covered by insurance and were a loss to the state institution.

Insurance policies had covered possible fire loss on the state institutional buildings here prior to the last session of the state legislature.

Second Fire in City.

A second fire, following on the heels of the threatened destruction of the East Central State Teachers college, caused a total loss to a restaurant belonging to W. A. (Bud) Ellison and threatened damage to the Ada News building, adjoining the establishment.

The fire fighters had not returned to the city hall but received the call at the college building. Their hurried run to the later fire scene could not prevent the total destruction.

Interest in the case in this country and in Coal county, where both men were well known, has reached a high pitch and a record attendance is expected at the examining trial.

Several Ada parties have signified intention of attending the hearing.

Over Ten Million Bales of Cotton Forecast for U. S.

(By the Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—This year's cotton production forecast was given today by the department of agriculture as 10,788,000 bales of 500 pounds each.

The forecast was based on the condition of the crop on August 25 which was 54.1 per cent of normal, indicating a yield of about 134.8 pounds per acre. Last month's forecast was 11,551,000 bales based on July 25 condition of 167.2 percent which indicated about 143.9 pound to the acre.

The condition in Oklahoma was given as 46 per cent of normal and the production as 791,000 bales.

CHAPTER XV

A Proposal.

Peter's departure made an enormous gap in Ann's life, and she turned confidently to Fanny to fill it. She wanted a good gossip about Hendricks, but to her surprise, she found her friend singularly elusive. Mrs. William gave her to understand that the cousins had been together almost constantly while Hendricks' was at home, but beyond that Fanny's mother was for once uncommunicative. She turned a ready purple with resentment at the upstart's treatment of her nephew, but at the same time the culprit fancied that she rejoiced in it. At any rate, Ann thought, Mrs. William's opinion made no difference, it was her uncle's judgment of the matter which she awaited with impatience.

By the time it came she had grown accustomed to the monotony of a life shorn of emotion. She liked the long unpunctuated days of late summer. The sight of the foreign envelope filled her with a strange dread; subconsciously she feared a reawakening.

Paris, August 29th, 1863.

"My Dear Ann:
I have received three letters in my last week's mail and I may say that their contents astonish me. I feel an old man and a sad one, after reading them. My sister-in-law I will not dwell on. She wrote me at length of your trip to Gettysburg, and while, at this distance, it seems an unnecessary thing to have undertaken, I feel that I am too far away for judgment. I can only be glad you are safe at home again and that thankfulness Hendricks is spared to us.

"Your letter told me of your final resolution to break with my nephew. I cannot say that I am surprised, particularly in the light of later events."

"What events?" Ann murmured, at a loss to understand.

"I will not conceal from you the fact that I am disappointed. I had hoped that, as time and the war went on, you might become attached to him; if, however, you cannot care for him, you are right in refusing to marry. I have not proved indifferent to his suit. This I cannot tell, but as he begs me—reasonably enough, owing to the fact that his mission necessitates his expeditious return to Italy—to allow him to approach you at once, you may consider or deny it in person.

"I have, at his suggestion, made inquiries in regard to him at the Italian embassy here. I find him to be a member of an important Italian family, and personally a favorite of the king. He should, I am told, go far. He has a palazzo in Rome, at present untenable for a supporter of Victor Emmanuel, a more modest establishment in Milan, and an ancient country place in Piedmont, where he was born.

"I can hear only good things of him, but you must remember that he is a native of Europe, where the customs and the ideals differ greatly from those you have known. However, if your feelings for him are of a sufficiently affectionate nature, these differences may be overcome. There are examples of such happy marriages. I am greatly hampered by not being able to talk with you, and by your lack of frankness when writing me. All depends on your feelings toward this young man. I am prepared to receive him as your husband if that is your wish, and I must tell you that you would be making what the world calls a brilliant marriage.

"I will not dwell on what your permanent residence in Italy would mean to me. I am, you must remember, an old man, with my life behind me. You must not consider me in making your decision except, I beg of you, to this extent. Count Avezzana must soon return to Italy, and he asks, if you accede to his proposal, that you will marry him before he leaves America and accompany him to Europe. I have his letter here—in the present deplorably disturbed conditions in my country it may well be years before I can again return to North America. Until Italy is united my place is there. It seems, therefore, my dear Ann, that, if you are to marry this young man, it must be done speedily, and in that case it will be impossible for me to be present. I find it difficult to believe that the ceremony would be legal without my presence, but such are the sad necessities of war. My work here is incomplete, and I have advices from the President begging me to remain indefinitely, as he is kind enough to believe me to be somewhat successful in my efforts to make public opinion for the Northern states. Therefore, if I may not take part in your wedding ceremony, I may, at least, share a day or two of your honeymoon. I shall await you in Paris with the liveliest anticipations.

"My dear Ann, be sure to act with deliberation and foresight to the end that your best happiness may be preserved. I am writing to the Count Avezzana, giving him my permission to pay you his attentions.

"Your affectionate uncle,
"HENDRICKS CORTLANDT."

For a time after reading her letter Ann sat, stunned, without movement and almost without thought. The whole thing was too preposterous to grasp all at once, and her first feeling toward Avezzana was indignation at his having so needlessly disturbed her guardian.

"Marriage!" she exclaimed, aloud. "A stranger like that!" She went to the window to cool her flushed face, and standing there, overlooking the familiar square, she summoned back her dimming memories of the Italian. Indubitably, he was a romantic figure, more darkly beautiful than any other man she had seen, and with something unknown and alien about him. He had been very good to her; she recalled her awakening in the cottage, with Avezzana's eyes upon her, and the subsequent scene which had so filled her with unreasoning panic.

"He had asked for her guardian's address. Now she knew why. . . .

Two Pullmans and one chaircar for those not wishing sleeping coach accommodations will leave Oklahoma City and veterans are expected to join the ranks all the way to Kansas City, where a stopover of about an hour will be allowed early Monday morning. At Kansas City Mr. Norton expects other Oklahomans, who have come by different routes, to join the special section which will run through to Milwaukee without change at Chicago.

Four hundred certificates have been sent to Oklahoma G. A. R. members, according to Mr. Norton. All of these certificates, which entitle the members to reduced railroad rates, will not be used the department adjutant general said. There will be a greater Oklahoma attendance, however, than the number who leave the capital in special coaches Sunday evening.

The Milwaukee encampment will probably attract between 15,000 and 20,000 members of the organization, Mr. Norton thinks. The business sessions open Thursday, and close the following day with the election of officers. written him, and should tell you that I told him he will share equally with you in my property. It seems to me but fair to reward in this way, his fine accomplishments as a soldier, and you will, please God, have enough with but half.

"And now, to the more serious matter of the other letter. You have never, in your letters, mentioned knowing a Count Avezzana, and yet he writes me for permission to ask your hand in marriage."

Ann gasped, and hastily reread this amazing statement, plainly written in her guardian's fine legible hand.

"He writes me for permission to ask your hand in marriage and, what is more, he states his belief that you will make him a charming young man. Such beautiful manners! Such delightful breeding!" Without going into it further, Ann understood that Mrs. Cortlandt had been informed of Avezzana's intentions.

Fanny was greatly excited at the prospect of meeting a genuine Italian count, for, in the sixties, titles were a novelty in New York. She asked Ann a great many questions about him, to which that young woman replied, dryly, "Oh, he is just a man, Fanny, like other men—blacker, perhaps."

Cooper-Robinson Match to be Climax of Fight Season for Ada.

Word received here today from the training camp of Harry Robinson, Chicago fighter scheduled to meet Archie Cooper here Labor Day in the main go of a ten-round card, verifies the report that Cooper will have his hands full in mastering the young Chicago mit artist.

A communication received this morning by A. R. Dixon, Cooper's manager, from Robinson, who is in Kansas City, declares that he is in perfect condition and is coming to Ada with the intention of giving Cooper a good lacing.

Robinson balances the scales at 158 pounds and is considered a dangerous opponent, according to reports received here. Robinson has been fighting in Chicago and other mid-western cities, where he established quite a rep. Robinson is enroute to eastern ports where he will make a stab at the big show.

Cooper has retained a strenuous workout campaign during the past week and reports in fit shape for the encounter.

Members of the Ada Athletic club in charge of the fight here, declare that they expect a record crowd in attendance at the Armory building when the preliminaries start Monday night at 8:30.

Athletic club sponsors declare that the Labor Day card will be the biggest out to be presented here. Thirty-four rounds of fighting will be staged with the promise of no dull moments for the entire period.

Lew Cutler, manager of the Coliseum Athletic club of Oklahoma City, will referee the main fight here between Cooper and Robinson.

SESSION LAWS NEED ATTENTION SAYS BAR

(By the Associated Press)

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 31.—The transformation into pastures and market gardens of hundreds of acres of swamp lands and submerged areas, is foreseen by John W. Plaisted, of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture under the state drainage and reclamation law passed by the 1923 legislature.

The wet lands of the state, it is estimated, cover from 300,000 to 500,000 acres, and range from small-sized bogs to one large swamp of 7,000 acres. Many accessible swamps can be drained and tilled, Mr. Plaisted points out, and the soil may be made to produce crops of hay, vegetables or pasture, thus helping to meet an ever growing need for agricultural land in these days of rapidly expanding towns and cities.

Financing has been the main problem in former reclamation projects in Massachusetts. The present law provides three separate methods: Funds may be raised by assessments in a given district, and deposited with the state treasurer; the members of the district may vote to incur debt, to be liquidated according to the terms of the law; or the old method of financing by appropriations by county commissioners may be adopted.

The law is held also to apply to lowlands in need of irrigation, and it is believed that such territory may be developed with the district methods outlined. The intent of the act is declared to be to help the people to help themselves. It is a private matter supervised and encouraged by the state, and according to agricultural authorities represents a movement of the greatest promise.

All regular classes of the Bible school meets at the church at 9:30. The hot weather is over now and we should all get into the work.

The pastor will preach at both the morning and evening services. The subject at the morning service will be, "The Power of Faith," from the text Matt. 9:29. After the special program at the evening service, we will bring a message from the subject, "The Price of a Haircut." All are invited and urged to come to all services of the church.

Young Matrons' Circle will meet Monday at 3 p. m. with Mrs. J. A. Leverett. 231 W. 16.

Our September meeting of the church financing association will meet at the church Tuesday evening at 7:30. Remember it is Tuesday evening this time. Some very important matters will be discussed at this meeting and all who are interested in the welfare of the church should be out. BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

FULLNESS OF JOY:—Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.—Psalm 1:11.

THE LEAGUE'S DISARMAMENT PLAN

Recently the disarmament commission of the league of nations made public its report and the recommendations it proposes to submit at the September meeting of the league.

Apparently, a very honest effort has been made by this commission to evolve a plan which will go a long way toward preventing war and at the same time will meet the objections which the Republican partisans advanced to Article 10 of the covenant.

The plan seems to provide for a number of continental compacts. Under the plan, for instance, all the American nations, including Canada, would enter into an agreement by which the counsel of the league of nations would have power to decide which nation, in case of war, was the aggressor and all the other nations would be called upon to assist the innocent nation, both by military and economic pressure. Under this scheme, America would be under no obligation to take part in any controversy in Europe, Asia or Africa and nations on these continents would not be expected to take part in any controversy arising in either North or South America. Such a plan, coupled with drastic disarmament, would undoubtedly go a long way toward avoiding war. The plan does not appear to be perfect, but it is a plan to assist a very imperfect world and appears to us to be better than any other heretofore suggested. The St. Louis Star says that this would remove all grounds for hostility of the league on the part of America, but it adds, that for a considerable time political hostility may be expected. There were many million people who were hostile to the league of nations two years ago, but most of them were hostile because political leaders misinformed them.—Oklahoma Democrat.

Nations differ in now way from individuals in their treatment of one another. If one thinks he can get away with it he likes to show off by humiliating some other fellow who cannot very well help himself. Hence, in dealing with little nations the big ones make demands they would never for a moment think of making on one of their own strength. For instance Italy would never for a moment think of making the demand on the United States or France that she has on Greece in regard to the killing of five of her subjects by outlaws on Greek soil. Some thirty years ago a mob in New Orleans shot about a dozen Italians to death. Italy protested with some vigor and demanded that the members of the mob be punished, but never one time did she suggest that United States get down on her knees to Italy in atonement for the act of the mob. It was the same thing when the World war started. Austria made demands on Serbia that would have called forth an instant declaration of war if made on one of her big neighbors and when the little nation did not at once prostrate herself in the dust Austria undertook to crush her.

A writer in a current magazine points out the alarming prospect of this country being left almost without such skilled laborers as carpenters, brick masons and plasterers in a few years. The last federal census showed only a small number of apprentices in the various trades and that although the population of the United States had increased 15 percent during the decade, there had been an actual falling off in several trades. This is probably due to two causes: the first being the tendency of the average boy to seek a white collar job at any sort of wages rather than soil his hands and the other to the limiting of apprentices by labor unions. However, the condition will probably right itself. The scarcity of skilled laborers has forced the scale of wages to dizzy heights in some lines. This will prove attractive to enterprising young fellows with a will to work. Then, too, more encouragement will be given apprentices and eventually the supply of skilled workers will again approach the demand.

The New York guy who recently got his name in print in a number of Oklahoma papers because of an article he wrote in which Oklahoma was pictured as a land of grafters, crooks and bums writes to the Oklahoman that he has received about 30 letters from the people in the state all of them congratulating him on his pen picture of conditions here. They no doubt comprised the sum total of those who agreed with him, the other 2,000,000 holding to an entirely different opinion. Thirty out of 2,000,000 is not so bad.

A scientist says that men's heads are becoming larger. Now if the quality of the contents of said heads can be improved also, the race may get along a few steps some generations hence. Perhaps some of the mean traits of character can be eliminated by working over the heads of the individuals of the race.

Governor Walton on Several occasions shown a commendable tendency to back up when he realized that he had made a mistake, but it is to be regretted that he shows no such tendency in his attitude towards pardoning and paroling the big crook in the penitentiary.

TWIXT THE DEVIL AND DEEP SEA

BUSINESS STEPS FOR LOAN FUNDS

Students Desiring Loans to Enable College Study Must Pass Requirements.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug 31.—High school graduates who intend to enter higher educational institutions this fall and plan to take advantage of the student loan law passed by the Ninth Oklahoma Legislature, must meet the same conditions any other borrower of funds encounters.

That is the substance of an analysis of the statute extending state deposits to any bank which loans money to a student under the new law. Several dozen inquiries concerning extension of financial aid to students have been received by the state department of public instruction, according to M. A. Nash, state superintendent. The analysis was made by his department.

Under the law any high school graduate may apply for a loan if he intends to enter a college or university within the state. The amount of money the student may borrow is limited to $300 annually under the statute. He may borrow $300 for a one-year course if he arranges repayment one year afterward. He may borrow $600 to be repaid two years later, the same ratio being maintained in loans for three and four years of college work.

Interest must not exceed six percent.

That is the attractive feature which appeals to the prospective students who have inquired for further information from the state board of public instruction, Nash says. In banks which make such loans to young men or women, the state promises, according to the law, to open depository accounts.

All banks making the loans and receiving state deposits, however, are responsible to the state for the funds loaned to the students, Nash said. This has the effect, according to the state superintendent, of making banks require the same sort of note, demanding the same security and arranging the same terms, with the possible exception of the amount of interest, which any other borrower would be called upon to meet. The ultimate result is that banks simply loan state money through their own institution, it is pointed out.

This Superintendent Nash states while offering an extension of $300 a year credit from the state, does not in any way relieve the student from any responsibility or necessity of presenting acceptable security for the funds borrowed.

Statesmen of World to Gather to Review Work Of League of Nations

(By the Associated Press)
GENEVA, Aug. 30.—The fourth general assembly of the League of Nations will be called to order Monday morning, Sept. 3, by Viscount Ishii, former Japanese ambassador at Washington and now ambassador to France.

The forthcoming meeting is regarded with great international interest. The League has passed through its most active year of endeavor, and numerous are the questions which will come up for discussion by the representatives of the 52 nations affiliated with the Geneva organization. It is regarded as certain that Ireland will apply for membership; Turkey and one or two other states may do likewise.

The assembly will bring together many of the world's foremost statesmen, including General Smuts, the celebrated leader of the South African Republic; Lord Robert Cecil; Dr. F. Nansen, for many years prominent in European relief work; former Premier Branting of Sweden; Foreign Minister Benes, of Czechoslovakia; representatives of the British overseas dominions, and spokesmen of some 16 South American republics.

Something like 1,500 people, including national delegates, experts in various fields, and journalists from all corners of the globe are expected, and already Geneva is making ready its display of flags of all the world, preparing the great fountain which plays in the inner harbor, and otherwise planning for the reception of men from many lands, of many races, and of many languages.

All the work of the assembly will be done in public. Every session, both plenary and committee, is open to the press. Apparently efforts are being made to prevent the league from falling into those ways of secrecy which often mark the course of diplomats in international negotiations. Occasionally, during the last year, some sessions of the council were held privately, with resultant criticism based on the allegation that, if the League, as it gets stronger, yields to the temptation to follow the road of secrecy, it is eventually doomed to failure because the keynote of its success must be open covenants openly arrived at. The assembly generally discusses not only what the League has done during the past year, but also what it has not done and should do.

Each state which is a member of the League may be represented by not more than three delegates who are appointed by and responsible to their respective governments. As the work of the League covers many different fields of international life, and as the sessions are run with the greatest possible expedition, many countries have supplementary delegates and expert advisors on various problems. Each, however, has but one vote. Practically all questions of importance can be decided only by unanimous vote. One state could block an agreement, if it wished "to take the responsibility. As a matter of fact such a contingency has not arisen in the history of the league. One of two policies has been followed. Either negotiations have been pursued until an agreement acceptable to all has been reached, or the League has voted to accept a proposal which has been agreed upon by a majority of the members.

INDIANS OPPOSE ORIGINAL CLAIM

Maintain American Ideas of Bloodthirsty Sayages All Wrong.

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—A campaign to eliminate any existing belief that the primitive methods of the American Indian are still employed, will be started at the powwow to be held here September 24-30 which will bring together the leading members of the remaining Indian tribes.

"It is for the purpose of showing the people of the country that the American Indian, who always has been looked upon as a savage hunting tribe, is only a kind, intelligent and educated brave enjoying life in his own simple way, that the powwow is planned," according to Miss Catherine Cook, Indian worker establishing closer relations between the Indians and the Department of the Interior.

"From many Indian reservations of the country will come the Indian braves and squaws, not in their native attire, but in the habiliments of civilized people. They will formulate plans whereby they can have better representation and better conditions. These tribal leaders seek a relationship with the interior department which will not keep them inconspicuous because of their inability to deal directly with the department. They desire a method of procedure which will be one of co-ordination."

Indian activities, at present widespread, will be coalesced here, if the plans of the convention are realized. Several Indian teams of La Crosse players will start East several weeks before the powwow here, playing an elimination series enroute. The two teams surviving the series will clash here for the final honors.

One of the forest preserves adjacent to Chicago will be named during the convention. An Indian village will make its appearance the evening of the convention. Indian music, displays and other exhibitions of Indian lore will be held during the week.

Enid and Alva to Take Lead in Pageant Taken From Opening of Strip

ALVA, Okla., Aug. 30.—Dawn of September 16, 1893, drew the curtains on a stage set for the most unique act in the thrilling drama of the settlement of the Southwest.

For 168 miles along the Oklahoma-Kansas boundary there stretched a line of varied travelers, each awaiting the signal from a sentry's rifle, that was to start the greatest race for homes in American history.

It was the opening of the "Cherokee strip" in northwestern Oklahoma, the promised land that held the hope of home and comfort for thousands who lined the border that day from Arkansas City, Kans., west to the old Woodward county line.

The scramble for homes that followed on the afternoon of that day, when men, women and children, in "prairie schooners," on horseback and afoot swarmed madly into the land thrown open by the government action, has become classic in the lore of Oklahoma.

Then the lean year that followed for many, the years spent in "dugouts" on the plains while farms were being improved and cities founded—these, too, have been given their lasting place in the story that is Oklahoma's.

And finally the pride with which the early settlers' point to the fair land they have produced, the thousands of acres of wheat farms, the herds of livestock, the busy, bustling towns and cities—this is the culmination of the story.

And all in all, the story from beginning to end, is to be re-enacted this year by the men and women who have played the leads in the 30-year drama that closes at noon September 16.

Alva and Enid, perhaps will lead in the pantomime that is to epitomize the 30 years of progress. In each of these cities a four-day celebration is planned that will have as its main feature the review of the history of the "strip."

Plans for the Alva celebration, just announced, provide for a variety of entertainment. Realism, the announcement says, is to be the watchword. The "sod shanty" with its "buffalo chip" fire, replica of the thousands of homes, such as dotted the plains after the opening of the strip, will find many old settlers to whom it will not be strange. The "dry salt bacon," chronicled as the principal diet of the lean years, will for once arouse only the memories of the wish for more toothsome fare.

Alva will try to dress herself in the style of the first years. Men with "six guns" will "wet their whistles" at the bars of frame sa-

DO YOU WONDER?

Asks This Lady, "That I'm a Believer in Cardui?"—Had Been So Weak She Had to Go to Bed.

Osawatomie, Kans.—Mrs. E. E. Keast, formerly of Illinois, residing here, says: "We moved to this state eleven years ago, and I had good health for a long while; and then some year or so ago I had a bad sick spell...."

"I got so weak I couldn't go. I couldn't stand on my feet at all. I had to go to bed. I suffered a great deal. I was so nervous I felt I couldn't live. I tried medicines, and everything; had the best of attention, yet I wasn't able to get up. I lay for three months, not able to do anything."

"My husband is a bill poster and has circulars distributed. One day there chanced to be a Ladies Birthday Almanac among his circulars. I read it, and told some of the family to get me a bottle of Cardui...."

"I quit all other medicines and took it (Cardui) faithfully, and two weeks from the time I began to take Cardui I was out of bed—better than for months."

"I kept it up and continued to improve until I was a well woman."

"Do you wonder that I am a believer in Cardui? I certainly am. And I am sure there is no better tonic made for women than Cardui."

New Years was celebrated as far back as 3,000 B. C., by the Babylonians.

British Parliament Fears Interference in Island Domain

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON.—Fear that American influences may eventually affect the relations between England and the British West Indies has invaded the Parliament and caused some members of the House of Lords to urge that the government lose no time in strengthening the existing bonds with the British colonies.

Viscount Burnham has urged that special representation at the Imperial Economic Conference be given to the West Indies, and that better communication on the sea and under it be established at once with that part of the Empire. He points out that communication at the present time is very bad, a condition that does not obtain with any other part of the Empire. Almost all of the news supplied to the West Indian papers comes from America and reflects the American point of view.

Would Shut Down Gas Works

"My stomach had been so filled with gas for the last three years that I felt I could pretty nearly supply our town. I also had frequent pains in right side in region of the appendix. Doctors didn't help much. One day my neighbor told me about what Mayr's Wonderful Remedy had done for him and I got a bottle of our druggist. I can say that it will do all and more than you claim for it." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Gwin & Mays, and druggists everywhere.

The One Girl for HimBy ELLA SAUNDERS
(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE acquaintance had begun before the train drew out of the New York terminal. Howard had helped the girl shift some of her baggage. By the time of the first call for dinner they were chatting easily. The next morning they greeted each other like old friends.

Howard was going to California to take up a ranch. A man of thirty-five, he had saved enough money to assure a future, with reasonable good care. He told Miss Carson about it while they were crossing Pennsylvania. But she told him nothing about herself, and here they were in Kansas.

By that time he knew that she was the one girl for him. He was not a man who made up his mind lightly. He had had love affairs, of course, but this was serious.

She found that out on the observation platform, just as the train was crossing the boundary of Colorado.

"I should like nothing better than ranch life," she said. "You see, I've always lived in cities. And now I'm going to San Francisco, to live in an apartment just like the one I left behind me in New York."

Words that would have made his position irrevocable were upon Howard's lips. Mary Carson knew that, and laid her hand on his arm.

"I'm going out to be married," she said. "We've been engaged—Oh, ever so long. It's three years since I've seen him. And he's a business man—a very successful business man. No ranches for him. And—will you take me inside, please?"

That was all, but that night their conversation was very strained. Both knew that they could never meet again after the destination was reached. He avoided her the next morning. Mary looked puzzled.

"You aren't a little angry about anything?" she asked him.

"Angry?" He looked disconcerted.

"Oh, what's the use of our pretending any more?" asked the girl with sudden frankness. "It's this way, isn't it? We met and found we liked each other, and we wish we'd known each other before. And we know that we aren't going to see each other after the journey's ended. So why shouldn't we enjoy the trip and be good friends?"

He tried to take her at her word, and they were almost boisterously happy passing through Utah. But when Nevada was reached a sadness fell upon both of them.

It was evening, and on the distant hills was the boundary of California. They were standing on the observation platform. Suddenly—neither of them knew how it happened—he had taken her in his arms.

"Mary, you don't love him!"

"You—you mustn't say that. And you mustn't—how did you know?"

"We love each other."

"I must be loyal to him."

"Not if you have ceased to care. Does he care for you?"

"As much as he can care. He—he isn't very demonstrative, you know." Suddenly she broke down. "Oh, I've dreaded it so much, and put him off so long, and at last he wrote me that I must come. He said it would be dishonorable if I played fast and loose with him; that he'd publish the story—Oh, it's too dreadful!"

"Mary, dear, a woman is privileged to change her mind."

She shook her head. "He—he's waited three years—and—Oh, no, I see now how mistaken we were in letting ourselves care. This must be good-by, my dear."

She surrendered for a few moments to his embrace. Then she had gone back into the car, leaving him standing there. And for hours he waited, till the berths were made up and he knew he needn't see Mary Carson again that night.

Well, it was fate, and he had learned to take its buffers in the course of his five and thirty years.

They did not speak to each other next day, and at last the train rolled into San Francisco. He descended to the platform. He saw a telegraph boy pushing through the crowd, heard him calling for Miss Carson. He called her. She took the telegram.

Next moment it was fluttering from her fingers, and the face she turned to Howard was ashen pale.

"He—he's married!" she gasped. "He—he brought me out on this wild goose chase out of revenge because I put him off. . . ."

"Not a wild goose chase," said Howard, supporting her with his arm.

The negro sexton of a little church in the South got up on the roof and replaced some broken shingles. He didn't like to acknowledge that the steep slant of the roof alarmed him, so he climbed up toward the broken spot.

A passerby called out, "Hello, Sam! Looks like it's ticklish work for you, climbin' toward heaven!"

Sam relaxed his caution for an instant, and started to slide down the roof!

Loud and fervently he was heard to cry: "Oh, Lawd! Save dis niggah! Lawd—Lawd, save dis nig—Nebber mine, Lawd! My britches done kottedched on a nail!"—American Magazine.

"Second. As the policy embodied in the Monroe doctrine is distinctly the policy of the United States, the government of the United States reserves to itself its definition, interpretation, and application. This government has welcomed the recognition by other governments of the fact and soundness of this policy and of the appropriateness of its application from time to time.

"But the United States has not been disposed to enter into engagements which would have the effect of submitting to any other power or to any concert of powers the determination either of the occasions upon which the principles of the Monroe doctrine shall be invoked or of the measures that shall be taken in giving it effect. As President Wilson observed: 'The Monroe doctrine was proclaimed by the United States on her own authority. It has always been maintained and always will be maintained upon her own responsibility.'

"This implies neither suspicion nor estrangement. It simply means that the United States is asserting a separate national right of self-defense, and that in the exercise of this right it must have an unhampered discretion.

"Third. The policy of the Monroe doctrine does not infringe upon the independence and sovereignty of other American states. Misconception upon this point is the only disturbing influence in our relations with Latin American states.

The declaration of our purposes to oppose what is inimical to our safety does not imply an attempt to establish a protectorate any more than a similar assertion by any one of the great southern republics of opposition to conduct on the part of any of the others endangering its security would aim at the establishment of a protectorate.

"I utterly disclaim, as unwarranted, the observations which occasionally have been made implying a claim on our part to superintend the affairs of our sister republics to assert an overlordship, to consider the spread of our authority beyond our own domain as the aim of our policy, and to make our power the test of right in this hemisphere. I oppose all such misconceived and unsound assertions or intimations. They do not express our national purpose; they belie our sincere friendship; they are false to the fundamental principles of our institutions and of our foreign policy which has sought to reflect, with rare exceptions, the ideals of liberty; they menace us by stimulating a distrust which has no real foundation. They find no sanction whatever in the Monroe doctrine. There is room in this hemisphere, without danger of collision, for the complete recognition of that doctrine and the independent sovereignty of the Latin American republics.

"Fourth. There are, indeed, modern conditions and recent events which can not fail to engage our attention. We have grown rich and powerful, but we have not outgrown the necessity, in justice to ourselves and without injustice to others, of safeguarding our future peace and security. By building the Panama Canal we have not only established a new and convenient highway of commerce but we have created exigencies and new conditions of strategy and defense. It is for us to protect that highway. It may also be necessary for us at some time to build another canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, and to protect that. I believe that the sentiment of the American people is practically unanimous that in the interest of our national safety we could not yield to any foreign power the control of the Panama Canal, or the approach to it, or the obtaining of any position which would interfere with our right of protection or would menace the freedom of our communications.

"So far as the region of the Caribbean Sea is concerned, it may be said that if we had no Monroe doctrine we should have to create one. And this is not to imply any limitation on the scope of the doctrine, as originally proclaimed and as still maintained, but simply to indicate that new occasions require new applications of an old principle.

pie which remains completely effective. What has taken place of late years in the region of the Caribbean has given rise to much confusion of thought and misapprehension of purpose. As I have said, the Monroe doctrine as a particular declaration in no way exhausts American right or policy; the United States has rights and obligations which that doctrine does not define.

And in the unsettled condition of certain countries in the region of the Caribbean it has been necessary to assert these rights and obligations as well as the limited principles of the Monroe doctrine.

Points Cuban Situation

"In 1898, the United States intervened in Cuba in the cause of humanity and because of a condition of affairs at our very door so injurious to our interests that it had become intolerable. In view of the distress, miseries, and barbarities that existed, our action, as John Bassett Moore has said, 'was analogous to what is known in private law as the abatement of a nuisance.' In the settlement that followed the establishment of Cuban independence Cuba agreed that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba. Cuba also agreed not to enter into any treaty with any foreign power which would tend to impair her independence, 'nor in any manner authorize or permit any foreign power or powers to obtain by colonization or for military or naval purposes or otherwise lodgment in or control of any portion of said island.' There were also restrictive provisions as to the contracting of debts. The United States thus holds a special position in relation to Cuba, but it should be pointed out and clearly understood that, while in view of this position we have acted as the friendly adviser of the Cuban government, our action has been solely for the purpose of aiding in maintaining the independence and stability of Cuba and thus not to create but to preclude the necessity of intervention under the treaty by encouraging the Cuban people to eliminate waste and corruption, to reduce public expenses to the normal requirements of government, and to secure the just and efficient administration which will safeguard the desired independence of Cuba and promote the prosperity which, with their abundant natural resources, the Cuban people are entitled to enjoy.

Reviews Haitian Situation

"It is impossible for me to review in any detail the events which led to the occupation of Santo Domingo and Haiti. In Santo Domingo, during the 40 years prior to 1907, there had been 16 revolutionary movements, and complete political and economic demoralization had resulted. A military government was established in 1916 and until recent months was continued in the interest of public order. This occupation was due to the demonstration, to use the phrase of President Roosevelt, of an impotence resulting in the lessening of the ties of civilized society and thus requiring intervention. But the point I desire to make is that instead of using this opportunity as has falsely been charged, to establish a permanent control of Santo Domingo, the government of the United States has been solicitous to arrange for the termination of the occupation and the withdrawal of its forces and has devoted its endeavors, earnestly and effectively, to the assistance of the Dominican people in establishing a sound basis for an independent government.

"Our attitude is one of independence, not of isolation. Our people are still intent upon abstaining from participation in the political strife of Europe. They are not disposed to commit this government of this hemisphere."

NEWSPAPERS

I don't know how come newspapers to be in the world, and I don't think anybody else does, and there ain't nothing said about them in the Bible. I think the editor is the missing link we read of, and stayed in business after the flood and then came out and wrote the thing up, and has been here ever since.

When the editor makes mistakes there is law suits and swearing and a big fuss, but if a doctor makes one there is a big funeral, cut flowers and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anyone else knowing what it means, but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife, he charges the man for the visit, but if the editor goes to see him, he gets a charge of buckshot. A college can make a doctor to order, but an editor has to be born—Exchange.

Bryan is also considered a frequent loser.

In advance to the use of its power in unknown contingencies, preferring to reserve freedom of action in the confidence of our ability and readiness to respond to every future call of duty. They have no desire to put their power in pledge, but they do not shirk co-operation with other nations whenever there is a sound basis for it and a consciousness of community of interest and aim. Cooperation is not dictatorship, and it is not partisanship. On our part it must be the cooperation of a free people drawing their strength from many racial stocks, and a cooperation that is made possible by a preponderant sentiment permitting governmental action under a system which denies all exercise of autocratic power. It will be the cooperation of a people of liberal ideas, deeply concerned with the maintenance of peace and interested in all measures which find support in the common sense of the country as being practicable and well designed to foster common interests.

To such aims the Monroe doctrine is not opposed, and with the passing of 100 years it remains to no just interest and deemed to be vitally related to our own safety and to the peaceful progress of the peoples of this hemisphere."
